Laura Callope brings a practical approach to resolving real estate and business disputes.

Laura prides herself on careful listening, problem-solving, and giving candid advice to clients. Her previous work as a court clerk gave her firsthand exposure to a broad range of legal matters. Today, her practice focuses primarily on real estate litigation, including boundary disputes, construction defect claims, and real estate disclosure matters; as well as business and partnership disputes involving small and closely held businesses.

Whether helping homeowners navigate unexpected property challenges or assisting business owners through difficult disputes, Laura understands the personal and financial stakes involved, and provides counsel that is collaborative and practical.
